1941 Ford During the initial year of this car, it evolved considerably. During the year, it evolved into two pieces with the lower front and back sections being joined. The 1941 Convertible had no rear side windows, the only side windows being in the doors; in 1942, quarter windows were added so the rear. The 1941 design would continue in an aborted 1942 model year and would be restarted in 1946 and produced until 1948 when the more modern 1949 Fords were ready. The front fenders came in three pieces, the theory being that small damages could be replaced easily. The hood risers changed, the early ones being the same as 1940 Fords, changing during the year to the better later version. starting cranks had been replaced by electric starters for decades, Ford cars included a manual starting feature until 1948 as an antidote to dead-battery syndrome The Ford car was thoroughly updated in 1941, in preparation for a time of unpredictability surrounding World War II a2f1b6586d
