Traditional climbing are now accepted by the leading traditional climbers. Traditional climbing differs from sport climbing where the protection equipment is already pre-drilled into the rockface in the form of permanent bolts. From the early 21st century, traditional climbers began to introduce the derived term 'greenpointing'; Traditional climbing (or trad climbing) is a type of free climbing in the sport of rock climbing where the lead climber places temporary and removable protection while simultaneously ascending the route; when the lead climber has completed the route, the second climber (also called the belayer) then removes this protection as they ascend the route. Traditional climbing is still the dominant format on longer multi-pitch climbing routes, including alpine and big wall routes 45a7df2cf9

Unlike most sports, mountaineering lacks widely applied formal rules, regulations, and governance; mountaineers adhere to a large variety of techniques and philosophies (including grading and guidebooks) when climbing mountains.
