Grammar There are, broadly speaking, two different ways to study grammar: traditional grammar and theoretical grammar. The term may also refer to the study of such rules, a subject that includes phonology, morphology, and syntax, together with phonetics, semantics, and pragmatics. Grammar rules may concern the use of clauses, phrases, and words. Grammar rules may concern In linguistics, grammar is the set of rules for how a natural language is structured, as demonstrated by its speakers or writers. linguistics, grammar is the set of rules for how a natural language is structured, as demonstrated by its speakers or writers 32b5c23fab

Fluency in a particular language variety involves a speaker internalizing these rules, many or most of which are acquired by observing other speakers, as opposed to intentional study or instruction. Much of this internalization occurs during early childhood; learning a language later in life usually involves more direct instruction... 32b5c23fab

The original purpose of medieval grammar schools was the teaching of Latin. Over time the curriculum was broadened, first to include Ancient Greek, and later English and other European languages, natural sciences, mathematics, history, geography, art and other subjects. In the late Victorian era, grammar schools were reorganised to provide secondary education throughout England and Wales; Scotland had developed a different system. Grammar schools of these types were also established in British territories overseas, where they have evolved... 32b5c23fab The school's main buildings and playing fields are located in the Lexden area of Colchester and there are around 950 pupils aged 11–18. Historically a boys' school, it has admitted girls to the sixth form since 1998 and specialises in science and languages. The school regularly tops national A-level league tables. 32b5c23fab

Grammar induction Grammar induction (or grammatical inference) is the process in machine learning of learning a formal grammar (usually as a collection of re-write rules Grammar induction (or grammatical inference) is the process in machine learning of learning a formal grammar (usually as a collection of re-write rules or productions or alternatively as a finite-state machine or automaton of some kind) from a set of observations, thus constructing a model which accounts for the characteristics of the observed objects. More generally, grammatical inference is that branch of machine learning where the instance space consists of discrete combinatorial objects such as strings, trees and graphs 32b5c23fab

Caulfield Grammar has three-day campuses in Victoria, Caulfield (Years 7–12), Wheelers Hill (K–Year 12), and Malvern House (K–Year 6). It has an outdoor education campus at Yarra Junction, and a student centre in Nanjing, China where the Year 9 internationalism programme is conducted. Caulfield Grammar is the second largest school in Victoria, currently catering for 3,315 students. 32b5c23fab

Dependency grammar Dependency is the notion that linguistic units, e. Dependency grammar (DG) is a class of modern grammatical theories that are all based on the dependency relation (as opposed to the constituency relation Dependency grammar (DG) is a class of modern grammatical theories that are all based on the dependency relation (as opposed to the constituency relation of phrase structure) and that can be traced back primarily to the work of Lucien Tesnière. A dependency structure is determined by the relation between a word (a head) and its dependents. words, are connected to each other by directed links. g. All other syntactic units (words) are either directly or indirectly connected to the verb in terms of the directed links, which are called dependencies. Dependency grammar differs from phrase structure grammar in that while it can identify phrases it tends to overlook phrasal nodes. The (finite) verb is taken to be the structural center of clause structure 32b5c23fab

Lexical functional grammar There has been little LFG work on phonology (although ideas from optimality theory have recently been popular in LFG research). Some recent work combines LFG with Distributed Morphology. It posits several parallel levels of syntactic structure Lexical functional grammar (LFG) is a constraint-based grammar framework in theoretical linguistics. It mainly focuses on syntax, including its relation with morphology and semantics. It posits several parallel levels of syntactic structure, including a phrase structure grammar representation of word order and constituency, and a representation of grammatical functions such as subject and object, similar to dependency grammar. The development of the theory was initiated by Joan Bresnan and Ronald Kaplan in the 1970s, in reaction to the theory of transformational grammar which was current in the late 1970s. Persian grammar The innovations remain in Modern Persian, which is one of the few Indo-European languages to lack grammatical gender, even in pronouns. (reprinted 2008) Platts, John T. (1894). The language became a more analytic language around the time of Middle Persian, with fewer cases and discarding grammatical gender.
