A consumer-level version based on the same interface and audio engine but with reduced features called Logic Express was available starting in 2004. Counting off is evident in musical genres other than Western classical and popular music; Ghanaian ethnomusicologist J. H. Kwabena Nketia has observed the benefits of such techniques in West African music. A silent count off, such as those given by an orchestral conductor using a baton, may be given as a value "in front" (e.g. "eight in front" refers to a count off of eight beats). In 1991 James Stephens and Neil Dunkley, who ran a small studio in Tottenham together at the time, became acquainted with Paul Ibiza of Ibiza Records. They helped him set up his new studio which consisted of an Akai 950 sampler an Atari ST computer running Cubase and various other pieces of studio equipment. After a few sessions of creating beats and experimenting with samples at Paul Ibiza's studio Stephens decided on the name 'Noise Factory' bringing in Kevin Mulqueen and Terry Turner to form the group along with Dunkley. Paul Ibiza then invited Noise Factory to release tracks on his then new label Ibiza Records as he was already a well established name in the rave scene at that time. Noise Factory released their first track, "Box Bass" in 1991. The track featured a reggae sub-bass, which was almost unheard of at the time.
