

A Study Of Turkish Critical Care Nurses Perspectives

Racial discrimination Individuals can discriminate by refusing to do business with, socialize with, or share resources with people of a certain group. Governments can discriminate explicitly in law, for example through policies of racial segregation, disparate enforcement of laws, or disproportionate allocation of resources. Some jurisdictions have anti-discrimination laws which prohibit the government or individuals from being discriminated based on race (and sometimes other factors) in various circumstances. The study focused on 67 qualitative and quantitative studies regarding Racial discrimination is any discrimination against any individual on the basis of their race, ancestry, ethnic or national origin, and/or skin color and hair texture. Some institutions and laws use affirmative action to attempt to overcome or compensate for the effects of racial discrimination. conducted a systematic review of research literature on the concept critical consciousness.
