Race (human categorization) Modern science regards race as a social construct, an identity which is assigned based on rules made by society. Studies in History and Philosophy of Science Part C: Studies in History and Philosophy of Biological and Biomedical Sciences. 1946–2003". The term came into common usage during the 16th century, when it was used to refer to groups of various kinds, including those characterized by close kinship relations. 39 (4): 437–450 Race is a categorization of humans based on shared physical or social qualities into groups generally viewed as distinct within a given society. The concept of race is foundational to racism, the belief that humans can be divided based on the superiority of one race over another. By the 17th century, the term began to refer to physical (phenotypical) traits, and then later to national affiliations. While partly based on physical similarities within groups, race does not have an inherent physical or biological meaning 4c93c86311
