Surface-supplied diving It is also nearly impossible for the diver to get lost. waterproofed canvas suit, and weighted boots. The primary advantages of conventional surface supplied diving are lower risk of drowning and considerably larger breathing gas supply than scuba, allowing longer working periods and safer decompression. Disadvantages are the absolute limitation on diver mobility imposed by the length of the umbilical, encumbrance by the umbilical, and high logistical. This is different from scuba diving, where the diver's breathing equipment is completely self-contained and there is no essential link to the surface. The original system used a manually powered diver's pump to supply air, and no reserve gas or bailout cylinder Surface-supplied diving is a mode of underwater diving using equipment supplied with breathing gas through a diver's umbilical from the surface, either from the shore or from a diving support vessel, sometimes indirectly via a diving bell 139434e9b7
