Reading comprehension Reading comprehension occurs on a gradient or spectrum, rather than being yes/no (all-or-nothing). Comprehension specifically is a "creative, multifaceted process" that is dependent upon four language skills: phonology, syntax, semantics, and pragmatics. Reading comprehension is beyond basic literacy alone, which is the ability to decipher characters and words at all. Informational books provide real-world knowledge for students and have unique features such as: headings, maps, vocabulary, and an index Reading comprehension is the ability to process written text, understand its meaning, and to integrate with what the reader already knows. The opposite of reading comprehension is called functional illiteracy. In education it is measured in standardized tests that report which percentile a reader's ability falls. Reading comprehension relies on two abilities that are connected to each other: word reading and language comprehension. view, and theme 92461adf9f
