Computer-assisted web interviewing The program allows for the questionnaire to contain pictures, audio and video clips, links to different web pages, etc. No default answer should be provided. It is considered to be a cheaper way of surveying since one doesn't need to use people to hold surveys unlike computer-assisted telephone interviewing. The website is able to customize the flow of the questionnaire based on the answers provided, as well as information already known about the participant. With the increasing use of the Internet, online questionnaires have become a popular way of collecting information. If a default answer is provided, it may be mistaken as an answer if Computer-assisted web interviewing (CAWI) is an Internet surveying technique in which the interviewee follows a script provided in a website.
