

Writing Your Self Transforming Personal Material

Prentice Mulford (May 30, 1891) was an American literary humorist, philosopher, and early figure in the development of the New Thought movement. He is recognized as one of the earliest voices to articulate the idea that thought itself is a creative force that influences both personal health and external circumstances. His philosophy centered on self-realization, health through mental harmony, and the transformative power of thought. Many of the principles that would become standard in the movement, including the Law of Attraction, the power of thought, spiritual autonomy, and mental healing, were clearly laid out in his Your Forces and How to Use Them, released as a series of essays during 1886–1892. Mulford's writings laid foundational concepts that shaped later metaphysical and psychological systems, including auto-suggestion and personal magnetism. He advocated for personal spiritual authority.

Laing took the expressed feelings of the individual patient or client as valid descriptions of personal experience rather than simply as symptoms of mental illness. Though associated in the public mind with the anti-psychiatry movement, he rejected the label. Laing regarded schizophrenia as the normal psychological adjustment to a dysfunctional social context. 0546c32238 Autoethnography has been used across various disciplines, including anthropology, arts education, communication studies, education, educational administration, English literature, ethnic studies, gender studies, history, human resource development, marketing, music therapy, nursing, organizational behavior, paramedicine, performance studies, physiotherapy, psychology, social work, sociology, and theology and religious studies. 0546c32238
