Cooperative learning Ross and Smyth (1995) describe. Unlike individual learning, which can be competitive in nature, students learning cooperatively can capitalize on one another's resources and skills (asking one another for information, evaluating one another's ideas, monitoring one another's work, etc.). the teacher from identifying areas where certain students struggle, as homework grades often reflect only the understanding of the better-performed students Cooperative learning is an educational approach which aims to organize classroom activities into academic and social learning experiences. " Students must work in groups to complete tasks collectively toward academic goals. Everyone succeeds when the group succeeds. Furthermore, the teacher's role changes from giving information to facilitating students' learning. There is much more to cooperative learning than merely arranging students into groups, and it has been described as "structuring positive interdependence a27b0ce354
