Distributed leadership With theoretical foundations in activity theory and distributed cognition, understanding leadership from a distributed perspective means seeing leadership activities as a situated and social process at the intersection of leaders, followers, and the situation.

Understanding how tasks are carried out and which are Distributed leadership is a conceptual and analytical approach to understanding how the work of leadership takes place among the people and in context of a complex organization. takes a task-oriented approach as a way to break down practice into manageable units of analysis. Rather than focus on characteristics of the individual leader or features of the situation, distributed leadership foregrounds how actors engage in tasks that are "stretched" or distributed across the organization. Though developed and primarily used in education research, it has since been applied to other domains, including business and even tourism fa4516f1d3

Holistic grading Rubrics use "deterministic Holistic grading or holistic scoring, in standards-based education, is an approach to scoring essays using a simple grading structure that bases a grade on a paper's overall quality. It differs from other methods of scoring written discourse in two basic ways. Holistic grading can also be used to assess classroom-based work. It treats the composition as a whole, not assigning separate values to different parts of the writing. standardized rubrics propose a pre-determined language outcome, whereas language is never determined, never free of context. And it uses two or more raters, with the final score derived. This type of grading, which is also described as nonreductionist grading, contrasts with analytic grading, which takes more factors into account when assigning a grade. Rather than counting errors, a paper is judged holistically and often compared to an anchor paper to evaluate if it meets a writing standard

Literature circle The intent of literature circles is "to allow students to practice and develop the skills and strategies of good readers" (DaLie, 2001). The aim is to encourage thoughtful discussion and a love of reading in young people. Observations On-going teacher observation and active participation in group A literature circle, or literature club, is equivalent for young people of an adult book club, but with greater structure, expectation and rigor. As with self-assessment, checklists or other rubrics can provide structure

Educational assessment manner and may include observation, inventories, checklists, rating scales, rubrics, performance and portfolio assessments, participation, peer and self-evaluation. Educational assessment or educational evaluation is the systematic process of documenting and using empirical data on the knowledge, skill, attitudes, aptitude and beliefs to refine programs and improve student learning. Assessment data can be obtained by examining student work directly to assess the achievement of learning outcomes or it is based on data from which one can make inferences about learning. Assessment is often used interchangeably with test but is not limited to tests. Assessment can focus on the individual learner, the learning community (class, workshop, or other organized group of learners), a course, an academic program, the institution, or the educational system as a whole (also known as granularity). The word "assessment" came into use in an educational context after the
