Google Street View privacy concerns into account that the Street View cameras take pictures from an elevated position, enabling them to look over hedges and walls designed to prevent some Privacy advocates have objected to the Google Street View feature, pointing to photographs that show people leaving strip clubs, protesters at an abortion clinic, sunbathers in bikinis, cottagers at public parks, people picking up prostitutes, and people engaging in activities visible from public property which they do not wish to be photographed and have published online. Before launching the service, Google removed photos of domestic violence shelters, and additionally allows users to flag inappropriate or sensitive. However, this does not take into account that the Street View cameras take pictures from an elevated position, enabling them to look over hedges and walls designed to prevent some areas from being open to public view. Google maintains that the photos were taken from public property 46c34468cc
