By 1904, Campbell realized they needed a character that would extol the virtues of Campbell soup. Grace Drayton, a freelance illustrator of children’s book and comic strips, was known for her chubby figures with round faces, wide-set eyes, and a pug nose. The artist modeled her characters after herself as she once stated in a newspaper interview in 1926, “I was much interested in my looks. I knew I was funny [looking].” The Campbell executives were delighted with her “round and jolly toddlers,” and thus the Campbell Kids were born. fb1398e42a == History == fb1398e42a The popularity of the 4 Ingredients series has also led to a 4 Ingredients television series, hosted by McCosker and broadcast in 24 countries including Australia, Africa, the UK, and New Zealand. fb1398e42a
