Stephen Jay Gould most significant contribution to evolutionary biology was the theory of punctuated equilibrium developed with Niles Eldredge in 1972. He was one of the most influential and widely read authors of popular science of his generation. The theory proposes Stephen Jay Gould (GOULD; September 10, 1941 – May 20, 2002) was an American paleontologist, evolutionary biologist, and historian of science. Gould spent most of his career teaching at Harvard University and working at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. In 1996, Gould was hired as the Vincent Astor Visiting Research Professor of Biology at New York University, after which he divided his time teaching between there and Harvard

The earliest clear evidence of life comes from biogenic carbon signatures and stromatolite fossils discovered in 3.7 billion-year-old metasedimentary rocks from western Greenland. In 2015, possible "remains of biotic life" were found in 4.1 billion-year-old rocks in Western Australia. There is further evidence of possibly the oldest forms of life in the form of fossilized...

Frederick Hutton (scientist) Transferred Captain Frederick Wollaston Hutton (16 November 1836 – 27 October 1905) was an English-born New Zealand scientist who applied the theory of natural selection to explain the origins and nature of the natural history of New Zealand. Whilst an army officer, he embarked on an academic career in geology and biology, to become one of the most able and prolific nineteenth century naturalists of New Zealand. He was issued the Indian Mutiny Medal with two clasps—Relief of Lucknow, Lucknow. March 1858, under the command of General Sir Colin Campbell Variation of traits, both genotypic and phenotypic, exists within all populations of organisms. However, some traits are more likely to facilitate survival and reproductive success. Thus, these traits are passed on to the next generation. These traits can also become more common within a population if the environment that favours these traits remains fixed. If new traits become more favoured due to changes in a...
