

Heroin Lies

Trainspotting (novel) various residents of Leith, Edinburgh, who either use heroin, are friends of the core group of heroin users, or engage in destructive activities that are Trainspotting is the first novel by Scottish writer Irvine Welsh that was first published in 1993. The novel is set in the late 1980s and has been described by The Sunday Times as "the voice of punk, grown up, grown wiser and grown eloquent". It is written in Scots and Scottish English, revolving around various residents of Leith, Edinburgh, who either use heroin, are friends of the core group of heroin users, or engage in destructive activities that are effectively addictions. The title is an ironic reference to the characters' frequenting of the disused Leith Central railway station 86ff1ab4af
