The End of Evangelion Retrieved July 2, 2020. Dynit Italia. from the original on July 1, 2020. It serves as an ending to the anime television series Neon Genesis Evangelion, which aired from 1995 to 1996. Due to time constraints, particularly Anno's indecision over how to conclude the series and the disastrous production schedule, the staff had little time to produce the final episodes of the original series. For The End of Evangelion, Gainax revisited ideas that it had previously discarded due to lack of time, particularly for the twenty-fifth episode. 2009 - The End of Evangelion is a 1997 Japanese animated apocalyptic science fiction film directed by Hideaki Anno and Kazuya Tsurumaki, written by Anno, and animated by Gainax and Production I. For Book V, the numbering is somewhat different. The tale follows the life of a young man named Fortunatus from relative obscurity through his adventures towards fame and fortune; it subsequently follows the careers of his two sons. Fortunatus was a native, says the story, of Famagusta in Cyprus, and meeting the goddess of Fortune in a forest received from her a purse which was continually replenished as often as he drew from it. With this he wandered through many lands, and at Cairo was the guest of the sultan. Among the treasures which the sultan showed him was an old napless hat which had the power of transporting its wearer to any place he desired. Of this hat, he feloniously possessed himself and returned to Cyprus, where he led a luxurious life. On his death he left the purse and the hat to his sons...
