Through interior design psychology, the performance and efficiency of the space and the well-being of the individual are improved. Figures like Walter Benjamin, Sigmund Freud, John B. Calhoun and Jean Baudrillard have shown that by incorporating this psychology into design one can control an environment and to an extent, the relationship and behavior of its inhabitants. An example of this is seen through the rat experiments conducted by Calhoun in which he noted the aggression...

Jean Baudrillard Jean Baudrillard (UK: /ˈboʊdrɪjɑːr/, US: /ˌboʊdrɪˈɑːr/; French: [ʒɑ̃ bodʁijɑ̃]; 27 July 1929 – 6 March 2007) was a French sociologist and philosopher with Jean Baudrillard (UK: , US: ; French: [ʒɑ̃ bodʁijɑ̃]; 27 July 1929 – 6 March 2007) was a French sociologist and philosopher with an interest in cultural studies. Baudrillard wrote about diverse subjects, including consumerism, critique of economy, social history, aesthetics, Western foreign policy, and popular culture. He is best known for his analyses of media, contemporary culture, and technological communication, as well as his formulation of concepts such as hyperreality. His work is frequently associated with postmodernism and specifically post-structuralism. Among his most well-known works are Seduction (1978), Simulacra and Simulation (1981), America (1986), and The Gulf War Did Not Take Place (1991). Nevertheless, Baudrillard had also opposed post-structuralism, and had distanced himself

Hyperrealism (visual arts) Hyperrealism has its roots in the philosophy of Jean Baudrillard, “the simulation of something Hyperrealism is a genre of painting and sculpture resembling a high-resolution photograph. Hyperrealism is considered an advancement of photorealism by the methods used to create the resulting paintings or sculptures. The term is primarily applied to an independent art movement and art style in the United States and Europe that has developed since the early 1970s. Carole Feuerman is the forerunner in the hyperrealism movement along with Duane Hanson and John De Andrea. than the reference photo or even the actual subject itself the University of Paris VI-La Villette School of Architecture. In this book, Baudrillard deals with fundamental issues such as politics, Identity, and aesthetics, and explores the possibilities of modern architecture and the future of our modern life.

Map-territory relation The map-territory relation is the relationship between an object and a representation of that object, as in the relation between a geographical territory and a map of it. Mistaking the map for the territory is a logical fallacy that occurs when someone confuses the semantics of a term with what it represents. “The rise of electronic media and Jean Baudrillard’s concept of simulacra further complicates the map-territory distinction. Korzybski held that many people do confuse maps with territories, that is, confuse conceptual models of reality with reality itself. Polish-American scientist and philosopher Alfred Korzybski remarked that "the map is not the territory" and that "the word is not the thing", encapsulating his view that an abstraction derived from something, or a reaction to it, is not the thing itself. which is complex is unusable. These ideas are crucial to general semantics, a system Korzybski originated

Simulacrum : simulacra or simulacrum, from Latin simulacrum, meaning "likeness, semblance") is a representation or imitation of a person or thing. Other art forms that play with simulacra include trompe-l'œil, pop art, Italian neorealism, and French New Wave. theorist Jean Baudrillard argues in Simulacra and Simulation that a simulacrum is not a copy of the real, but becomes truth in its own right: the hyperreal A simulacrum (pl. The word was first recorded in the English language in the late 16th century, used to describe a representation, such as a statue or a painting, especially of a god. Literary critic Fredric Jameson offers photorealism as an example of artistic simulacrum, in which a painting is created by copying a photograph that is itself a copy of the real thing. By the late 19th century, it had gathered a secondary association of inferiority: an image without the substance or qualities of the original 789beff930

Simulacra are copies that depict things that either had no original, or that no longer have an original. Simulation is the imitation of the operation of a real-world process or system over time. 789beff930

Sign value In sociology and in economics, the term sign value denotes and describes the value accorded to an object because of the prestige (social status) that it imparts upon the possessor, rather than the material value and utility derived from the function and the primary use of the object. Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy. "Jean Baudrillard". For example, the buyer of a Rolls-Royce limousine might partly value the automobile as transport, yet might also value it as a sign that signifies his or her wealth to a particular community and to society in general. 2008-12-24. which Karl Marx recognized as a characteristic of capitalism as an economic system. The automobile's transport-function is primary, from which arises its use-value, whilst the social prestige function is secondary, from which arises its sign-value 789beff930
