Jamming avoidance response 5 Hz. , The jamming avoidance response is a behavior of some species of weakly electric fish. It occurs when two electric fish with wave discharges meet – if their discharge frequencies are very similar, each fish shifts its discharge frequency to increase the difference between the two. By doing this, both fish prevent jamming of their sense of electroreception. This behavior was given the name “jamming avoidance response”; several years later in 1972, in a paper by Theodore Bullock, Robert Hamstra Jr f8ed41ce14

Traffic congestion Traffic congestion on urban road networks has increased substantially since the 1950s, resulting in many of the roads becoming obsolete. While congestion is a possibility for any mode of transportation, this article will focus on automobile congestion on public roads. Drivers can become frustrated Traffic congestion is a condition in transport that is characterized by slower speeds, longer trip times, and increased vehicular queuing. Vehicles are fully stopped for periods of time, this is known as a traffic jam, a traffic snarl-up (informally) or a tailback. Mathematically, traffic is modeled as a flow through a fixed point on the route, analogously to fluid dynamics. When traffic demand is great enough that the interaction between vehicles slows the traffic stream, this results in congestion f8ed41ce14
