Problem structuring methods Some widely adopted PSMs include. discipline: learning within the unknowable. Problem structuring methods (PSMs) are a group of techniques used to model or to map the nature or structure of a situation or state of affairs that some people want to change. PSMs are usually used by a group of people in collaboration (rather than by a solitary individual) to create a consensus about, or at least to facilitate negotiations about, what needs to change. Metacognition There are generally two components of metacognition: (1) cognitive conceptions and (2) a cognitive regulation system. In addition to nonhuman primates, other animals are also shown metacognition. The term comes from the root word meta, meaning "beyond", or "on top of". Metamemory, defined as knowing about memory and mnemonic strategies, is an important aspect of metacognition. Metacognition can take many forms, such as reflecting on one's ways of thinking, and knowing when and how oneself and others use particular strategies for problem-solving. metacognitive abilities in monkeys. Foote and Crystal (2007) provided the first evidence Metacognition is an awareness of one's thought processes and an understanding of the patterns behind them. Research has shown that both components of metacognition play key roles in metaconceptual knowledge and learning 0a7b7ca05d

Intellectual giftedness 5 percent of the population—that is, IQs above 130. It is thought to persist as a trait into adult life, with various consequences Intellectual giftedness is an intellectual ability significantly higher than average and is also known as high potential. There is no generally agreed definition of giftedness for either children or adults, but most school placement decisions and most longitudinal studies over the course of individual lives have followed people with IQs in the top 2. These consequences sometimes include stigmatizing and social exclusion. Definitions of giftedness also vary across cultures. children, variously defined, that motivates differences in school programming.
