Mattel claimed the song violated the Barbie trademark and turned Barbie into a sex object, referring to her as a "Blonde Bimbo." They alleged the song had violated their copyrights and trademarks of Barbie, and that its lyrics had tarnished the reputation of their trademark and impinged on their marketing plan. Mattel also claimed that the cover packaging of the single used Barbie pink, a registered trademark owned by Mattel. MCA contested Mattel's claims and filed a counterclaim for defamation after Mattel had likened MCA to a bank robber. MCA's lawyers also cited the earlier Bild Lilli doll – a German adult-oriented novelty toy which served as the basis for the original Barbie dolls – in their defense against Mattel's claims that Aqua sexualized the doll...
