God in Jainism According to Jain doctrine, the universe and its constituents (namely, soul, matter, space, time, and principles of motion) have always existed. All souls who have achieved the natural state of unlimited bliss, unlimited knowledge (kevala jnana), unlimited power and unlimited perception are regarded as God in Jainism. This quality, however, is subdued by the soul's association with karmic matter In Jainism, godliness is said to be the inherent quality of every soul. Instead, souls (in this case, devis or devas) who have reached Heaven for their merits and deeds influence the Universe for a fixed period until they undergo reincarnation and continue the cycle of enlightenment. This quality, however, is subdued by the soul's association with karmic matter. In Jainism, godliness is said to be the inherent quality of every soul. Jainism rejects the idea of a creator deity responsible for this universe's manifestation, creation, or maintenance 89fd5eb6f8

Bahá'í Faith on life after death Indeed, the next world's life is sometimes delineated in stages The Bahá'í Faith affirms the existence of life after death while not defining everything about it. those who have not well embraced Godly virtues and those who have not largely rejected them. The soul on death is said to recognize the value of its deeds and begin a new phase of a conscious relationship with God, though negative experiences are possible 89fd5eb6f8
