Principal councils are responsible for services such as education, transport, planning applications, and waste collection and disposal. In most of England, there is a single level of local authority district known as a unitary authority. In other areas, a two-tier system of local government is used in which a non-metropolitan county council shares responsibility with a non-metropolitan district council for these services; this...

9dce9b9320 == History == 9dce9b9320 Local food (or locavore) movements aim to connect food producers and consumers in the same geographic region, to develop more self-reliant and resilient food networks, improve local economies, or to affect the health, environment, community, or society of a particular place. The term has also been extended to include not only the geographic location of supplier and consumer but can also be "defined in terms of social and supply chain characteristics." For example, local food initiatives often promote sustainable and organic farming practices, although these are not explicitly related to the geographic proximity of producer and consumer. 9dce9b9320 There is no universally fixed definition of which modes are included. While systems such as buses and railways are commonly cited, air travel is often excluded from general discussions of public transport due to its market-driven structure and competitive pricing. Common examples include city buses, trolleybuses, trams (or light rail), rapid transit systems, passenger trains, and ferries. Intercity public transport is primarily provided by airlines, coaches, and intercity rail, with high-speed rail networks under development in several regions. The company is developing the T Network, an integrated multimodal transport network across Wales, using trains, buses, walking, wheeling and cycling.

Public transport Public transport (also known as public transportation, public transit, mass transit, or simply transit) refers to forms of transport made available for use by the general public. Public transport systems typically operate on fixed routes and schedules and charge a standardized fare intended to cover operating costs, often supplemented by public funding where required

Each local authority The functions of local government in the Republic of Ireland are mostly exercised by thirty-one local authorities, termed County, City, or City and County Councils. The principal decision-making body in each of the thirty-one local authorities is composed of the members of the council, elected by universal franchise in local elections every five years from multi-seat local electoral areas using the single transferable vote. Each local authority sends representatives to one of three Regional Assemblies. The competencies of the city and county councils include planning, transport infrastructure, sanitary services, public safety (notably fire services) and the provision of public libraries. Many of the authorities' statutory functions are, however, the responsibility of ministerially appointed career officials termed Chief executives 9dce9b9320
