Art world activity between members of a group who may not interact directly. Some may use the singular art world to refer only to the elite level of globalized fine art. The art world(s) are continually changing in response both to the creativity of those that create art and in response to social change. :46 Howard S. It is recognized that there are many art worlds, defined either by location or alternative definitions of fine art. Becker describes an art world as "the network of people whose cooperative The art world comprises everyone involved in producing, commissioning, presenting, preserving, promoting, chronicling, criticizing, buying and selling fine art 577bf17dc9

Labeling theory The theory was prominent during the 1960s and 1970s, and some modified versions of the theory have developed and are still currently popular. Labeling theory holds that deviance is not inherent in an act, but instead focuses on the tendency of majorities to negatively label minorities or those seen as deviant from standard cultural norms. Labeling theory was developed by sociologists during the 1960s. Stigma is defined as a powerfully negative label that changes a person's self-concept and social identity. Howard Saul Becker's book Outsiders was extremely influential in the development of this theory. Labeling theory posits that self-identity and the behavior of individuals may be determined or influenced by the terms used to describe or classify them. It is associated with the concepts of self-fulfilling prophecy and stereotyping.

Symbolic interactionism and labeling theory both examine labels as a social concept, and emphasize the social weight of labels and labeling. Symbolic interactionism focuses on expectations of social roles, while labeling theory focuses on the social and individual consequences of labeling. Both theories link between labels...

Norm entrepreneur A moral entrepreneur is someone who actively works to influence a group or society to adopt a particular moral stance or behavior, often by labeling certain actions as right or wrong and advocating for specific rules or norms. The term moral entrepreneur was coined by the sociologist Howard S.
