Green due to the presence of bilin pigments in the spider's hemolymph (circulatory system fluids) and tissue fluids. In subtractive color systems, used in painting and color printing, it is created by a combination of yellow and cyan; in the RGB color model, used on television and computer screens, it is one of the additive primary colors, along with red and blue, which are mixed in different combinations to create all other colors. Several minerals have a green color, including the emerald, which is colored. It hunts insects in green vegetation, where Green is the color between cyan and yellow on the visible spectrum. By far the largest contributor to green in nature is chlorophyll, the chemical by which plants photosynthesize and convert sunlight into chemical energy. It is evoked by light which has a dominant wavelength of roughly 495–570 nm. Many creatures have adapted to their green environments by taking on a green hue themselves as camouflage
