American automobile industry in the 1950s Finally, in the 2005 model year, the Chrysler 300 nameplate was The 1950s were pivotal for the American automobile industry. By the end of the decade, the industry had reshaped itself into the Big Three, Studebaker, and AMC. The age of small independent automakers was nearly over, as most of them either consolidated or went out of business. The industry was maturing in an era of rapid technological change; mass production and the benefits from economies of scale led to innovative designs and greater profits, but stiff competition between the automakers. this time for the Chrysler 300M, which was produced for the 1998 through 2004 model years. The post-World War II era brought a wide range of new technologies to the automobile consumer, and a host of problems for the independent automobile manufacturers b8f448df20
