Dodo bird verdict Wampold, Bruce E (2007), "Psychotherapy: the humanistic (and effective) treatment" The Dodo bird verdict (or Dodo bird conjecture) is a controversial topic in psychotherapy, referring to the claim that all empirically validated psychotherapies, regardless of their specific components, produce equivalent outcomes. Frank, JD (1961), Persuasion and healing: A comparative study of psychotherapy. The conjecture was introduced by Saul Rosenzweig in 1936, drawing on imagery from Lewis Carroll's novel Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, but only came into prominence with the emergence of new research evidence in the 1970s. It is named after the Dodo character in Alice in Wonderland e9d90f5529

Common factors theory Persuasion and healing: a comparative study of psychotherapy (3rd ed. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Common factors theory, a theory guiding some research in clinical psychology and counseling psychology, proposes that different approaches and evidence-based practices in psychotherapy and counseling share common factors that account for much of the effectiveness of a psychological treatment. This is in contrast to the view that the effectiveness of psychotherapy and counseling is best explained by specific or unique factors (notably, particular methods or procedures) that are suited to treatment of particular problems.
