North Atlantic Aerosols and Marine Ecosystems Study ; Lawson, Gareth L. ; McGillicuddy, Dennis J. ; Penna, Alice Della; Skomal, Gregory B. The long history of research in this location, as well as relative ease of accessibility, made the North Atlantic an ideal location to test prevailing scientific hypotheses in an effort to better understand the role of phytoplankton aerosol emissions on Earth's energy budget. (2018) The North Atlantic Aerosols and Marine Ecosystems Study (NAAMES) was a five-year scientific research program that investigated aspects of phytoplankton dynamics in ocean ecosystems, and how such dynamics influence atmospheric aerosols, clouds, and climate. Gaube, Peter; Braun, Camrin D. ; Fischer, Chris; Thorrold, Simon R. The study focused on the sub-arctic region of the North Atlantic Ocean, which is the site of one of Earth's largest recurring phytoplankton blooms

Effective altruism William MacAskill responded to Berger and Penna, defending Effective altruism (EA) is a 21st-century philosophical and social movement that advocates impartially calculating benefits and prioritizing causes to provide the greatest good. The movement gained popularity outside academia, spurring the creation of research centers, advisory organizations, and charities, which collectively have donated several hundred million dollars. It is motivated by "using evidence and reason to figure out how to benefit others as much as possible, and taking action on that basis". Robert Penna of Charity Navigator for being "moralistic, in the worst sense of the word" and "elitist". People who pursue the goals of effective altruism, who are sometimes called effective altruists, follow a variety of approaches proposed by the movement, such as donating to selected charities and choosing careers with the aim of maximizing positive impact
